

Twelve Sisters and Twelve Planets

The problem of Prometheus

Twelve Sisters and Twelve Planets

The Problem of Prometheus

© <https://www.filmnoir.ca/> (2025)

Preface

Have you ever gotten a feeling of déjà vu? A feeling that you're repeating a sequence or series of activities which you've done before but can't clearly remember. Sometimes such feelings can be so strong, you'd even be able to predict quite accurately the next set of activities to follow.

Well, if you've had those kinds of experiences then you've had a much smaller version of memories from a past life. This is in acknowledgement of the fact that we live in circles, commonly referred to as the 'Circles of Life'.

I am not exactly sure about what triggers my strange memory processes or what I call spiritual trances, but for this one I was triggered by a simple item. A simple item, unlike when I get triggered by falling in love, meeting someone new or partaking in an activity like playing football or reading a folklore.

A simple manual hand fan triggered my memory, but how strong the memory. How do I start to explain that I remember 12 planets? How do I even explain that I remember the name of the 12th planet as Athena? How do I remember things that I haven't done?

I was taught at school that there were 9 planets in our solar system and later in life I learnt from a Facebook post that scientists were investigating a 10th planet in the solar system in addition to other claims of investigating the existence of other habitable planets.

I used to have strange dreams and trances which I thought was a spiritual problem associated with the possession of a tribal god called Ogun from my hometown.

This book is about an unexplainable memory that left me more confused than enlightened, but I later felt relieved when I saw the scientific claim that a 12th planet has been discovered in our solar system.

I hope this book gives you a better understanding of our world and where we should be heading in regard to our human journey, the 'Human race'.

Chapter 1

Memories

Wikipedia defines memory as the faculty of the brain by which data or information is encoded, stored, and retrieved when needed. Thus, it is the retention of information over time for the purpose of influencing future action.

For us to recall events, facts or processes, we must commit them to memory. According to Zimmermann (K.A.) the process of forming a memory involves encoding, storing, retaining and subsequently recalling information and past experiences. Zimmermann goes further to classify memory into different types including Implicit memory, Procedural memory, Explicit memory, Semantic memory, and Episodic memory.

Have you ever gotten a feeling of déjà vu? A feeling that you're repeating a sequence or series of activities which you've done before but can't clearly remember. Sometimes such feelings can be so strong, you'd even be able to predict quite accurately the next set of activities to follow.

Well, If you've had those kinds of experiences then you've had a much smaller version of memories from a past life. This is possible because we live in circles, commonly referred to as the 'Circles of Life'.

Such memories might seem impossible because one cannot remember what hasn't yet occurred and it seems more appropriate to say that the person saw into the future. But it isn't really the future the person saw!

The remembered future is not the future of the present time, but rather a memory of a completed circle from a past human race. So relative to this current human race circle, the remembered life circle could have advanced beyond our current state. For example, having visions of higher technology or of activities in space travel which we haven't yet technologically attained. This is what this author refers to as a 'past future life'.

This author, having gone through mental illness and regained his sanity, believes that the human brain is like a compact disc filled with memories. This disc-like capability makes it possible for the brain to skip and misbehave, bringing back memories of a 'past future life'.

Consider a 'video compact disc' (VCD), that has been ruined either by overuse or scratching the surface. If you insert it into a VCD player, it will still play but you'd experience misbehaviors in the way it plays. It could sometimes show cracks in scenes by jumping from the beginning to the middle or end of the film or it could just hook or pause in play leaving 'still pictures' of a totally different scene.

This compact disc-like capability makes it possible for the brain to skip and bring back memories of a 'past future life'.

This disc-like capability is likely the same explanation for people who have mental problems after sustaining injury to the head or for those who claim to be 'seeing things' like spirits, apparitions, ghost appearances.

Some good books, movies and music contain memories from a completed circle, and they are usually good because we can subconsciously identify with them.

At the time 'Harry Potter' was written by J. k. Rowling, there were no inventions of tablets, or phones with moving pictures, but the Harry Potter novels and movies had vivid descriptions of moving pictures in what appeared to be like spiritual newspapers. Today, we can see moving pictures on our smart phones and tabloids.

J. k. Rowling also wrote fictiously about single-manned aircraft using spiritual powers, but today we have single manned drones that have been scientifically invented.

The movies 'Terminator' starring 'Arnold Schwarzenegger' and 'I-Robot' starring 'Will Smith' showed artificial intelligence robots who seemed to have gained control of themselves and were wrecking havoc on mankind. Today that sequence seems to be in play as more artificial intelligence robots are being produced and weaponized. The United States of America has tested combat ready robot dogs capable of sniffing out enemy hideouts and assessing difficult to penetrate enemy positions.

In space exploration and battle movies like Star Wars, Star trek, Elysium, and Prometheus, we experience a feeling of connection like we took part in the activities. This is because most of these movies have most likely been written by people with memories of a 'past future life'.

In the book titled 'Endymion' by 'Dan Simmons', we see a high tech but very unnatural and inorganic world, where the church had become military dictators and Muslims had been raptured. The technology described in Endymion had become very unrealistic by giving opportunities for space jumps and vanishing from one planet to another. The main plot of the novel concerned fighting for the possession of the last girl on Earth. I suspect, this last girl was the last natural being capable of reproduction or procreation.

Furthermore, some reggae musicians and Rastafarians sing or speak about an old time of black civilization in ancient Egypt referred to as 'Kemet'. They claim that Africans were more civilized than present day Europe and America. These claims I believe are memories of a 'past future life'.

The 'past future life' is therefore a pre-existent life form or alternate version of humanity which has reached its highest attainable level but became destroyed or stuck.

It is not clear to this author, how many life forms or life cycles have existed previously but the descriptions of various battle-modes between the confused Angelic and Demonic side of God described in the eBook 'The Angels and Demons Feud' available on www.filmnoir.ca would give a glimpse into how many times or trials have been made at attaining our full potential as a life form.

Our current life form is one of the many restarts and it is of utmost importance that we get it right this time.

If we let love lead and let love guide us in our affairs, we would achieve so much more than we ever thought we would.

Chapter 2

Mindless Behavior

Mindless is defined by the 'Merriam-Webster' dictionary online as, marked by a lack of mind or consciousness, or marked by displaying no use of the powers of the intellect, or an activity requiring little attention or thought, especially activities that are not intellectually challenging or stimulating.

Semi-mindless behavior is a situation where the person is half conscious and not totally lost in a different realm or state of mind but is still conscious of happenings around him. This is unlike complete trance where the person might be in danger of bodily harm due to a total loss of consciousness. Thus, it is possible to have mindless tasks, which are things done without any care or thought.

Semi-mindless behavior can be observed in skilled craftsmen, who can work on a machine, process or procedure without thinking about it. For example, Musicians who are very skilled at playing a music instrument; Skilled craftsmen on a weaving procedure or Ladies weaving a new hairstyle.

Mindless behavior can be observed in spiritually possessed people in situations termed as 'demon possessions' or 'speaking in tongues' by the religious.

Mindless behavior can be observed in mad or destitute people, who appear to no longer be conscious of the proper way of things and can walk completely naked in public, look dirty or even eat dirt from garbage bins.

Mindlessness can be observed in kids or even adults who 'sleep-walk' during sleep and have no knowledge of their actions when they are woken up.

Individuals who are prone to mindless behavior can become stuck in thoughts while driving on long trips and this could cause accidents. Thus, such individuals shouldn't drive for long distances like travelling to a different city or state.

I remember becoming mindless while training with the school team in the United Kingdom, during my Master's program in 2011. It was the same people same pitch, but I was in a different realm. I could feel the presence of beings I couldn't see and my whole-body system felt different. I felt super and of cause I played football in a way I didn't know I could, because I don't normally play. Yes, it was a strange experience, and the coach must have been confused by my irrational behavior. Besides, I got exhausted easily and I was always panting.

Spiritual trances are usually mindless, and they could go on for days, hours, minutes or even mere seconds of mindless thinking depending on the situation and trigger of the person affected.

My memories of the twelve sisters and their associations to twelve planets was a brief moment of mindless trance lasting about an hour in mid 2019, unfortunately at that time I was only able to write updates on my phone's 'Whatsapp status' but in the next chapter I'd try to remember as much as I can from that day.

Chapter 3

Mindless Memories of the Twelve Planets

I had recently moved back into my parents house because my exploits as a wedding DJ hadn't turned out to be as lucrative as I had envisioned and there was too much competition in the already saturated entertainment sector. I wasn't making enough money from my investment in equipments and even though I enjoyed playing music, I couldn't meet up with bills and personal expenses.

On a hot sunny afternoon in mid 2019, I cannot remember the exact month, but the rains, which usually start in April, hadn't come yet. I had just woken up from a really deep nap and I was sweating all over, even my bed sheets were soaked with sweat. I must have been dreaming but I couldn't really remember the dream and there was power outage as usual, hence, no electric fan.

I got up and walked to the living room, grabbed a manual hand fan from the living room table and went back into my room to cool myself with the hand fan and 'Wham'!!! It all came pouring in as follows;

In my trance I had twelve sisters. In fact, I was Ogun, the Gawd of Thunder and lightning and I had started the world with twelve sisters. I had a directive from the mighty father and mighty mother to love them and to ensure they were loved.

I had received an instruction "...And twelve sisters to mother twelve tribes..." but I wasn't sure where the instruction was coming from.

I was the 'Sun' the 'twelve sisters' were 'twelve planets' and I must love them for all eternity to ensure none feel cheated out of love and to reduce jealousy.

I came out of my trance, I was all sweaty. What a weird dream? How silly to claim that there are twelve planets? I mean there are only nine right? Besides, scientists just made claims of discovering a tenth planet but it hasn't even been accepted in teaching curriculums yet. I reached for my hand fan to cool myself, then I noticed the fan had a 'Sun' with 'twelve petals'. I laughed with tears in my eyes.

I am not exactly sure why I remembered the name of the 12th planet or why remembering the name of the planet is important, but I subconsciously referred to it as Athena, Athene or Athinee. Athinee is a local tribal slang pronounced 'Ah tin nea', and as a local slang it means 'small but mighty'.

When I started thinking about the trance experience I tried to understand why the slang of 'small but mighty' would be associated with it and I thought; - 'Maybe scientist would only be first able to see a small part of a much bigger planetary body, or maybe it was the fragment of a crumbled planet, or it carries a greater and unprecedented force around it's atmosphere'. Whatever the reason was, I just had a strong feeling that there was something symbolic about the association of 'small but mighty' with the twelfth planet.

Then suddenly I felt very distressed, my sisters are all the women in the world, and there was so much gender discrimination and sexual slavery. There is forced sexual circumcision, forced sexual initiation and female genital mutilation, and there was so much discrimination to women.

I wept because I could do nothing and that was when I wrote on my WhatsApp status that there should be 'Sister's day'. From my perspective, it was a day for all men to show love to their sisters and apologize for any wrong women were suffering in the world. A happy day for women.

Unfortunately, I cannot remember the exact date but I don't think the exact date matters.

As it is with trances and dreams, they are never really clear to utmost certainty but this was what I saw. Besides just last night (10/19/2020), I was dreaming, I was in somewhere like a school, but a scientific school and I was reciting the names of the planets in our solar system, and I added 'Croton' I think after 'Saturn' and 'Pluto'. The name was stuck in my mind when I woke up.

Planet Croton, I've never heard of it.

Chapter 4

Symbolism of Twelve Sisters

During my trance state, I had gotten a statement or instruction; "...and twelve sisters to mother twelve tribes...". My memories of the instruction were incomplete; thus I used three dots to signify that it is an incomplete statement.

I became intrigued by the symbolism of 'twelve'. The number twelve has various symbolisms through history and spiritually.

The number 12 is a vital aspect of calculating time and this is evident in the 12 calendar months, 12 hours in the clock face and 12 constellations of the zodiac. The Chinese horoscope also has 12 animals; hence the number 12 is considered by numerologists and astrologists as a number that signifies completion.

In the history of the world as written by the Israelites in the Christian bible, there are 12 tribes of Israel and the documented ancestors of the middle east Jacob and Ishmael both had 12 sons each. It is also stated in the bible that King Solomon appointed 12 officers over Israel. Furthermore, in biblical prophesies of revelations, the kingdom of God has 12 gates guarded by 12 angels.

Through history great masters and teachers have been recorded to have 12 primary followers including Odin, Jesus Christ, Prophet Muhammad (Pboh), Pontiff Maximus, St. Francis of Assisi, Confucius, Mithra, Ali, and Napoleon. Furthermore, there are 12 major gods of Olympus in Greek mythology and 12 gods of Egypt.

In Egyptian mythology, the egg of Osiris contains 12 white pyramids, symbol of the good, and 12 black pyramids, emblems of the evil. Furthermore, there are 12 verses of the emerald table from Egypt attributed to Hermes Trismegist.

In Japanese mythology, the creator is sat on 12 cushions.

In Greek mythology, Hercules had 12 tasks and there are 12 names of the sun in Sanskrit called the 'mantras'. Furthermore, there are 12 petals of Anahata Chakra to be worn around the heart, and 12 Sahasrara Chakra on the head.

There are 12 ribs on a man and in measurements, 12 inches make a complete foot. Furthermore, Eggs, which are a symbol of life, are usually calculated in dozens.

Thus, there is a very significant value attributed to number 12 that refers to a complete whole or harmony in human affairs.

In addition, I decided to search for history or folklores relating to 12 sisters because I wanted to understand why my trance referred to starting the world with '12 sisters'.

The folklores or fairy tales I saw online included 'The 12 dancing princesses', 'The 12 brothers' and 'The 12 sisters'. However, the only tale that gave me significant similarities to 12 planets was the Asian tale of 12 sisters.

In the tale, the father of 12 sisters became bankrupt and unable to cater to their needs. Consequently, he took a decision to abandon the 12 sisters deep in the forest with 12 packs of rice for their survival. However, when the 12 sisters opened their packs, they were surprised to see that the packs all contained sand except one pack which had rice. Thus, the 12 sisters had to share this pack of rice among themselves.

The tale goes on to talk about the presence of a witch or ogre in the forest whom the sisters later had to rely on for survival before escaping her wickedness. However, it is the packs of rice that gave me symbolic significance to 12 planets.

In our solar system, which has now been established to have 12 planets, there is currently only one naturally habitable planet, Earth. This is due to our climate which is a result of different natural forces including the trees and oceans. Thus, if our space exploration travels are to be significant, we might need to share earth's resources with the rest of the planets and this implies replicating our climate or transferring life to other planets. However, this is a scientific activity that involves a lot of calculations and I might not be right in my inferences or symbolisms.

www.filmnoir.ca

Chapter 5

Scientific Discovery of the Twelfth Planet

According to an article by R. B. Robert in Space.com (2006, online), the tally of planets in our solar system would jump instantly to a dozen under a highly controversial new definition proposed by the International Astronomical Union (IAU).

The proposal tries to plug a big gap in astronomy textbooks, and addresses discoveries of Pluto-sized worlds that have in recent years pitched astronomers into heated debates over terminology.

The asteroid Ceres, which is round would be recast as a dwarf planet in the new scheme.

Pluto would remain a planet and its moon Charon would be reclassified as a planet. Both would be called "plutons" however, to distinguish them from the eight "classical" planets.

A far-out Pluto-sized object known as 2003 UB313 would also be called a pluton, and that would make Caltech researcher Mike Brown, who found 2003 UB313, formally the discoverer of the 12th planet.

However, Mike Brown isn't in complete agreement with this new classification because by scientific count there are already 53 known planets in our solar system with countless more to be discovered.

An example, Brown cites is that 'it does not make sense to consider Ceres and Charon planets and not call our Moon (which is bigger than both) a planet'.

However, this author considers the previous revelations in his trance and the symbolic meaning of the term 'Small but mighty' as a clue that distant planets might appear small because we haven't developed the technology to provide accurate descriptions of their sizes. We haven't even accurately calculated the dimensions of the earth including the depths of our oceans and seas or the various land masses.

Chapter 6

The Human Race

The human race is usually used to classify 'Man' as a body of life or a living organism regardless of racial, tribal, religious or cultural differences. This is fine and totally applaudable.

However, from this author's perspective, the human race is envisioned as the collective journey of 'Man' through life including our past and future ascensions.

To be in line with this perspective or to understand this perspective, one has to grasp the concept of reincarnation as a process of rebirth, where one's 'essence' or 'spirit being' is continually reborn and multiplied as a human through time.

In the Christian bible, God gave an instruction to man 'Go into the World and multiply'.

In my vision of twelve sisters and one son, the son was supposed to love the twelve sisters. In other word's this includes giving the twelve sisters reproductive seed to multiply.

This concept of multiplication implies rebirth or reincarnation. Without trying to create religious arguments, this author believes that the claim of the Christian Jesus that 'destroy this body and I will rebuild it in three days...', is a claim of reincarnation that has been misunderstood.

In my trances, I have seen different versions of the beginning. I had a trance where the world was being destroyed by fire and I had to save some chickens which I took to the presence of God. These chickens were transformed to women and given back to me, to return to earth and multiply.

I couldn't tell from the trance if I was a 'Cock' as well, but now that I think about it in retrospect, I consider if it is the chickens that later became the twelve sisters.

These confusions arise because my trances and spiritual revelations come in bits and pieces. Thus, I have to creatively piece them together like a giant jigsaw puzzle.

Another explanation for the beginning is 'Superman theory'. Superman theory is a concept construed by this author in relation to the story of the Hollywood superhero. The concept acknowledges a failed system or planetary body where there's only room to save a few by sending them to a distant habitable planet where there's hope for survival.

This is represented in the beginning of the superman story where his parents needed to send him away on a small space capsule when their Planet was having quakes and about to be totally destroyed. Superman, thus arrives earth, were there is a different gravitational pull from his planet of origin, and this might be a reason for his super nature.

This concept of superman theory may sound superficial and ridiculous, but if we consider the current state of things. The destruction of our planet from climate change and global warming, the improvements in space explorations and the claims of earthlike planets discovered in naturally habitable positions in space. Then we can visualize the concept of superman theory and understand that we need to be more serious about checkmating climate change and global warming.

This is because if we keep being irresponsible with our environment, maybe in the not-too-distant future, the earth would be crumbling and we would only have capacity to transport a select group of people to a discovered habitable planet somewhere in space.

I also hear messages of prophecies in music, and Post Malone's song titled 'Circles' carries messages related to this concept. His lyrics read "Run away, but we're running in circles...". Thus, this author believes that the concept of running or searching for a different habitable planet is only a futile repetition of circles. The right thing to do would be to learn to live in harmony with a planet's system, in regards to sustaining ecological balance.

From this author's perspective and current understanding, the prophets or essences that carry prophecy or messages are humans with 'DNA's infused with memories of our past mistakes or our proper direction in this current human race. So either with great technology something was written in our DNA or it was imposed by God in our hearts.

One may ask, Where are we racing to?

Firstly, let us consider the Christian perspective of attaining heaven or getting into the presence of God. This is reflected in the claim of a promise of heaven after death. It is also evident in the old testament, where humans attempted to ascend into the heavens by building the 'Tower of Babel'. However, they didn't have the technological capacity to build such structures, and they had a wrong concept or perspective about the heavenly bodies. Just like African children sometimes climb trees in futile attempts to touch the sky which appears close in mirages.

This concept of attempting to enter heaven through structures might also be visible in Egyptian pyramids and ancient structures from the Mayan civilizations.

Man has always had a desire to understand God and to ascend into the heavens and this is currently expressed through space travels. Although, scientists now have a better perspective on the nature of the heavenly or planetary bodies.

If we combine the concepts of reincarnation, ascension into the heavens through space travel, and the concept of earth as the only habitable planet in our solar system, we can place these concepts in the asian tale of the twelve sisters with one pack of rice.

This will give us an idea of a need to share or transfer resources from the earth to other planetary bodies. However, this can only be successfully done if there is proper sustenance of earth's ecological system and peaceful cohesive harmony among humans.

We first need to seek balance in the system of things on earth, then we can be successful in our 'Human Race' or 'Journey of Ascension' into space.

We would then attain the heavens, which is a reference to space exploration and establishing habitats on other planets.

Chapter 7

The Twelve Sisters

Honestly, I have written more significant trance revelations and messages on my social media handles including LinkedIn, Facebook, and X (Twitter) than is available on the website Filmnoir.ca along with eBooks.

My messages therefore might be more meaningful to those who have kept tabs on me since around 2019. It was much later in 2020 that I first decided to compile eBooks on Amazon and later in 2025 that I created the website Filmnoir.ca to provide a better understanding not just to readers but also to myself, as I still seek to develop my awareness.

I once had a trance where I calculated the human races to be about 12 or 13 and I listed it on my social media pages but now I struggle to remember exactly how I wrote it. I hope those who saw it at that time will put it to good use.

Let me try to remember:

1. White or Caucasian
2. Black African
3. Asian (Chinese, Japanese, Koreans)
4. Bangladesh & Thailand Brown

5. Indian and Pakistani Brown
6. Nomadic Arabs
7. Indigenous North American
8. Eastern European
9. South American (Brazil, Equador, Bolivia...)
10. North African
11. Aboriginal Australians and Amazon Brazil
12. Eskimos

Not bad for a list of distinct qualities or physical features in our human race. Although, I might not be right and there might be missing or overlapping categories. I believe that the 12 races are an adequate representation of the 12 DNA strands originating from the 12 mothers of humanity.

If you associate these 12 races with our 12 planets, you'd understand that there's still a lot of misdirection in our current systems and a lot of work to be done to cover our lapses.

For example, the search for habitable planets in space exploration might be a misdirection from the true task of scientific development, because if you relate the 12 races to the 12 planets you'd observe that even on earth different races live in different climates which others consider impossible to live in.

To some Africans living in Canadian winter is impossible and to some Canadians living in Eskimo weather conditions is impossible. Isn't it then surprising to see that in reality the Eskimos have lower dependence on technology than Canadians?

We are sometimes misdirected in our thoughts because we hold on to 'past future life' mistakes instead of forging a new path. Instead of breaking the cycle of repetition we aim to hold on to the status quo. Especially from certain leaders who have established a self-aggrandizing empire for themselves.

Let us look beyond ourselves and egos to see the general purpose of our humanity. The bigger picture which promises an achievable heaven. Let us understand that it is our duty to create heaven, to build a better world which we would later come to enjoy.

In this perspective, we work to build a better world for our future selves, because we are a reincarnating species.

Even Disney world officially has 12 princesses, although they are not an adequate representation of the 12 races. Hopefully, Disney can fix that and create a better mindset of harmonious unity among our kids.

Yes, Mars can be habited just like the nomads habit the desert, and Pluto can be habited just like the Eskimos habit the Arctic regions.

It might sound impossible but remember that technology and human understanding is developing every day and those cultures currently habiting extreme regions on earth make little use of technology.

Chapter 8

The Problem of Prometheus

My trances come in different forms, and this one is about a Greek god called Prometheus. In my usual way, I had the revelation before digging deeper to seek understanding through online searches.

Prometheus is a Titan god in Greek mythology. He is credited with the creation of humanity from clay and his intelligence for being a champion of mankind. He is also generally seen as the author of the human arts and sciences. He was said to have defied the Olympian gods by taking fire from them and giving it to humanity in the form of technology, knowledge, and more generally, civilization.

History books claim that Prometheus was punished by Zeus, king of the Olympian gods to eternal torment for his transgression of stealing fire from Olympus and giving it to humans. Prometheus was then bound to a rock, and an eagle was sent to eat his liver, but his liver would grow back overnight, only to be eaten again the next day in an ongoing cycle. In ancient Greece, the liver was thought to be the seat of human emotions.

Another notable figure in Greek mythology is Sisyphus. Sisyphus is said to have been punished by Zeus for revealing his wrongs and sent to eternal punishment in the underworld where he is forced to roll an immense boulder up a hill only for it to roll back down every time it neared the top, a repetitive eternal punishment. His punishment represents a task that is both laborious and futile (Sisyphean tasks).

An ability to question accepted norms is a sign of intelligence and humans are supposed to be an intelligent species. Therefore, keep an open mind with the following analysis.

Firstly, Prometheus is a Titan God. Which means he's pre-Olympian which makes him senior to the Olympians including Zeus. Therefore, it is wrong to say that Prometheus defied the Olympian gods. I suspect it's the other way around.

Prometheus could have provided fire for developmental purposes, including warmth, cooking, and development of tools, while the Olympians led by Zeus who is known for converting other peoples' properties and territories including the wives of Kings could have corrupted this knowledge for the wrong uses of war.

In my trances, I have felt connected to Arch-Angel Micheal, Adam, and Prometheus, and in due consideration of the repetitive cycles of life, and our reincarnation abilities are thinking these three represent the same entity in different life forms.

The ancient gods are still us, but only in much lesser forms from reincarnation and multiplication, but we should learn to understand and break repetitive cycles which make us bounded to a life of suffering, problems, and wars.

In perspective of the twelve sisters, Prometheus can be seen as a seed providing guidance for development to ensure that his sisters are well catered for and loved.

If we consider reincarnation among Greek mythology, Prometheus is the same personality in Sisyphus, who's punished to push a rock up a cliff.

Do you see the similarities? Consider this;

While Prometheus is bonded to a rock, Sisyphus is bonded to push one up a cliff, and while Prometheus liver (emotion) are eaten up each time it grows, Sisyphus' rock falls back down the cliff each time it reaches the top.

Emotions are the bedrock of love. Therefore, in current proper perspective, we see that Prometheus and Sisyphus try to build a world of love but their efforts are rendered fruitless by the works of deceiving gods and history. History which has become human culture.

The main subject of the website filmnoir.ca is the entrapment and enslavement of women, the destruction of love. Which in this perspective relates to the destruction of the twelve sisters, the twelve mothers of humanity.

Hence, every culture, tradition, or system designed to destroy love, is designed to destroy ourselves.

If Prometheus is a senior Titan why then can he be punished by Zeus or why is Zeus capable of spoiling his work? That I cannot answer, but I would provide insight.

As a Titan and a senior god associated with creating humanity from clay, Prometheus bears similarity to Adam. As a true god, Prometheus wouldn't manifest himself in physical form to alter the physical process of things, unlike Zeus who transformed and had sex with king's wives.

Prometheus would, therefore, most likely provide insights and guidance rather than interfere physically, because there are consequences to breaking the seal between the spiritual realms and the physical ones.

The impact of a god, especially a Titan on human affairs might be catastrophic or even apocalyptic in nature.

However, our affairs are time bond and there are limits to the extent of misdirection which our world can bear.

Hence, we sometimes receive global catastrophe like Tsunamis, earthquakes, Global warming, Climate change etc. These are all consequences of a wrong direction or growth from a culture or systems of the destruction of love, the discrimination of the weak and female gender.

Hence, Prometheus liver of love gets destroyed by our accepted norms each time it grows, while Sisyphus' rock of development comes crumbling down the cliff each time it reaches its peak.

Thus, the systems, cultures, and traditions which accept the destruction of love, make it more difficult for Prometheus, Sisyphus, Adam, Micheal etc. to guide and direct humanity to its true potential.

These alludes to the repeating cycles of humanity. Cycles which end up destroyed because of misdirection or wrongness.

Love is our foundation. It is out of love that Prometheus pushes or turns the engine of creation that keeps our world spinning, just like a loving husband would endure hard labor to provide for his family.

Let us give love a break, let us redirect our affairs and show our twelve queens true love. A respect for the female gender and a stop to the discrimination of the weak.

Towards, the freedom of love and a better human race.

